Doxology

Because of three leap years (2024, 28, 32) it will be another eleven years until January 1st falls on a Sunday (2034). If the Lord tarries, those who remain will be at least a decade older when granted the privilege of beginning the year with worship. A hopeful thought. A deliberative thought.

Children are impatient at the slow march of time. Single years seem to pass so slowly. Yet parents remember their children's lives and shudder with how quick went their journey from infant to adult. Entire decades now seem to have passed in the wink of an eye. The duties of care shift. Children become parents. Parents become children. Your time is coming.

Yet, all the while, the sun rose and the sun set in exactly the same rhythms. Time still came for all of us at exactly the same speed, calibrated sixty seconds to the minute, sixty minutes to the hour, twenty-four hours in every passing day. Time is the great leveler. None have more; none have less. It is only a partial truth that "time is money" because money can be saved or spent, depending on priorities. Time, on the other hand, is never truly saved or spent. Time is only served ... once. Once gone, unlike money (or what money may have procured), time is never recovered. You may burn a dollar bill and then work to make another. Try all you can with all you have yet you can never create even a single second. That, loved ones, is only for God.

Consider how every breath you take is the gift of God's grace to you. Consider how every relationship and opportunity this day affords is all of grace to you. Every time you open your eyes or fill your hands with work, service or leisure is all of grace to you. You are entitled to nothing. You are given everything. What's more, loved ones, in Christ, you are given eternity.

Is this not, "Amazing Grace"?!
